Lyme Disease and Other Tick-Borne Diseases

NH Department of Health and Human Services (NH DHHS) recommends:

- Awareness that the incidence rate of Lyme disease in NH in 2011 was the third highest in the nation. In fact, since 2006, NH’s has been in the nation’s top five states for Lyme disease incidence rate. In most NH counties, over 50% of deer ticks sampled from 2007-2010 were infected with Borrelia burgdorferi, the bacteria that causes Lyme disease.
- Prevention of disease with frequent tick checks after possible outdoors exposure since removal of a deer tick within 24-36 hours of attachment can prevent disease transmission.
- Recognition that diagnosis of early Lyme disease (erythema migrans) should be based solely on clinical suspicion since diagnostic serologies (including IgM) may not yet be positive.
- Report all tick-borne diseases, confirmed or suspected, to the Division of Public Health Services (DPHS) within 72 hours at 603-271-4496 (after hours 1-800-852-3345, x5300).
